A Hard Market

- Since 2015, the number of claims against large international companies has increased significantly and this is not limited to US domiciled companies.
- Significant increase in investigation and defence costs and rising frequency and severity of settlements.
- Until relatively recently the Global D&O Price indexing has shown consistent prolonged decline with compound rate reduction.
- Increasing gap between claims and premium continues to widen even with price corrections over the last 18 months.
- A long period of suppressed premiums combined with increasing losses had led to London D&O insurers reducing capacity, increasing premiums and imposing stricter terms.
- The London market has been imposing even harsher renewal terms on some specific sectors including: Oil & Gas, Mining and Tobacco due to claims trends.

Claims and losses are increasing

A substantial proportion of the claims notified to the most recent years of D&O insurance will not be resolved for several years to come. Nonetheless, the market has taken the clear view that the picture is not a rosy one.

The number of notifications over the last four years is approximately double the number of notifications between 2007-2010.

Leading loss driver – US Federal Securities Class Actions

As can be seen from the charts below, US securities class actions have more than doubled between 2012 to 2019.

COVID-19 Impact on D&O

- Organizations around the world have been dealing with a myriad of COVID-19-related issues and resulting financial and operational hardships. Risks associated with directors and officers (D&O) liability are among the many risks that are top of mind. In the context of this pandemic, the risks may include:
  - The adequacy and accuracy of disclosures in a financial/business environment with so much in flux, including many businesses trying to cope with shutdowns and other unprecedented pressures.
  - Fiduciary and other duties owed. Changes are occurring quickly and there is no real precedent for many of today's tough decisions.
  - Complications and challenges in balancing the needs and priorities of today's diverse and complex interests among key stakeholders.
  - Regulatory and compliance uncertainty in facing unparalleled events and responses by authorities.
  - Workforce and operational adjustments bring new, potentially unanticipated risks.
  - Legal, financial and other external advisors may be overtaxed or unavailable as many others are wrestling with COVID-19 related issues.
  - Reputation risk arising from perceptions, well-founded or not, of how management has responded to the pandemic.
- The London D&O insurance market was already experiencing considerable upheaval and the COVID-19 pandemic has made the market even more challenging.
- The fear of a systemic impact across D&O portfolio's appears to be driving steep increases in rate and reduction or in some cases removal of capacity.
- Insurers are reacting to this in a number of ways, which varies from insurer to insurer. At the least, in advance of renewal, especially those in the nearer term, insureds should expect heightened underwriter focus on COVID-19 impact, plans and disclosures.
- So far, top D&O underwriting areas of focus are liquidity and industry. Inquiries may be tailored to company-specific concerns or they be limited to a consistent COVID-19 questionnaire that asks the same questions of all insureds.
- Inquiries may also drill down on COVID-19-related risk disclosures, the impact on financial results, operations, product/services shortages, industry-wide concerns, liquidity/solvency, and cyber security. For some companies, insurers may attempt to modify terms that were, several weeks back, formally or informally quoted or conveyed.

Conclusions

- Directors and officers are the subject of increasing exposure; from the #MeToo movement to climate change to increased regulatory scrutiny, there is no doubt that D&O insurance is increasingly important.
- Over the last 12-18 months, insurers have been reducing the size of lines they will write, increasing premiums, tightening terms and, in some cases, withdrawing from this market entirely.
- COVID-19 has only made this position worse.
- With few new entrants into the D&O insurance market to take up the capacity of those who have pulled out, it can be difficult to find a replacement for an insurer who, somewhere on a large programme, is seeking to impose unpalatable terms.
- A lot more time may be required to place a risk than has been needed in previous years and clients are likely to face additional disclosure requirements.
